THE RAILROAD STRIKES.

Engineers Refuse to Help the Knights of Labor—Bad Blood Between Them.

Militiamen Collide With a Mob of Strikers—Freight to Be Moved Under Police Protection.

Strikers in Possession of the Road, and Refuse to Allow Trains to Run.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Complete paralysis of all traffic on the New York Central, caused by the Knights of Labor when they struck the first blow Friday night, led them to believe they could maintain the stoppage of business on the roads of the company.

This they have not succeeded in doing, and it is evident that a general feeling of disappointment prevails among the strikers, though they will not admit this. They placed strong reliance upon the assistance of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who, according to the Knights, were to have taken a hand in the fight.

Last night Holland himself told a reporter that there was an understanding to this effect, but to-day he said he had heard nothing further about the matter and could not tell what the Brotherhood would do.

A prominent member of the Brotherhood said to-day that the locomotive engineers were not to be in this strike. It was not their fight, but of course, he added, should they be ordered out they would go. He did not think such an order would be given.

The Brotherhood, said several others, remembers the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy strike, in which their places were taken by Knights of Labor, and are not over-anxious to help the Knights now.

To-day the regular schedule of the passenger service of the New York Central and Harlem roads was resumed, the only change being the consolidation of certain outgoing Western trains. The tie-up on the West Shore road, which was inaugurated last night, did not affect passenger traffic.

Freight business was brought to a standstill, but

PASSENGER TRAINS FAN AS USUAL and were very little delayed. Police Captain Mellvain, who is on duty at the Grand Central depot, said that he had seldom seen a more orderly crowd of strikers.

There were no looting and no gathering Note was posted in the depot to-day stating that persons seeking employment on the New York Central, should make application at the office of the Wagner Palace Car company. This result was that applications were received by the score. One of the officials said that 150 men had been taken, all being expected to go to work today.

The result of the conference held by railroad officials was that Vice-President Webb late this afternoon issued a circular giving the company's position on the strike.

In the circular Webb states that the company in selecting their men does not propose that they shall be designated by the Knights of Labor; and when promotions are to be made the company will not be bound by the sanctities of rules promulgated by the Knights of Labor. Due consideration will be given to the length of service, but the first and most important rule will be qualifications of men for the place.

If employees have grievances the proper officers will grant hearings and see that consideration is given, but will not allow consideration to interfere between employer and employees. For this reason, Webb states, he refused to allow Holland to discuss any differences alleged to exist between the company and its employees, and not for the reason, as he stated, that the company objects to employees being members of labor organizations.

Master Workman Lee, of the strikers' district assembly, arrived here from Albany to-day, and attended a meeting of Knights this afternoon. More than 30,000 were represented. Lee enthusiastically read reports received from various local assemblies along the line of the road. What they were could not be learned.

Later this afternoon new orders were issued for the police, made necessary by an attempt to run freight trains, which will be made to-morrow. The main body of the police will be stationed in the vicinity of Spuytzen Duyvil, which is considered the key to the situation. No trouble, however, is anticipated. J. J. Holland and Secretary Hayes, of the executive board of the Knights of Labor, left to-night for Detroit.
Before departure they ordered all the fireengines on the Vanderbilt system here to quit work. At this hour the

ENGINES ARE DESERTED
at the Grand Central depot. District workman Lee says he arrived from Albany for the purpose of taking charge of affairs.
At 3 o'clock Holland and Hayes announced that affairs had taken such shape that they would not start for Detroit at present.

Secretary Hayes, of the Knights, called on Vice-President Webb to-night and left a letter from Father Ducey favoring arbitration. Webb declined to treat with Hayes, as he said there was nothing to arbitrate and he could not take back the discharged men under any circumstances.

The Chicago and North Shore limited, due here at 1 o'clock this afternoon, was tied up by the strikers at De Witt, N.Y., and is not expected to arrive before 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. There is great trouble at De Witt, and the militia have been called out. The employees on the train that stopped at De Witt took out and destroyed the coupling pins and threatened violence to any men who might go to work. The train from Buffalo and Syracuse, due at 10:25 o'clock this morning, was stopped and deserted this side of Syracuse.

At midnight 1,000 police marched from various precincts to take possession of the railroad tracks from Spuytzen Duyvil to Yonkers. At 10 o'clock in the morning it is proposed to start the first freight train.

STRIKERS FIGHT MILITIA.
DE WITT, N. Y., Aug. 10.—The movement of freight under military escort this evening was resisted by the strikers.
Deputy Sheriff Kratz had his revolver pointed in the face of a striker, and four or five soldiers were surrounded by about thirty strikers. So closely were the soldiers pressed that they could not use their bayonets.

Finally the train moved up into the yard under the protection of the state soldiers.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Three companies of militia, held in command at the armory, and sixty Pinkerton men have been sworn in as deputies. They have been gotten out and everything is in readiness for battle. It is said upon the good authority that an effort will be made to open the road at East Syracuse in the morning, and that militia will be on hand to open fire should there be any interference on the part of the strikers.

THE STRIKERS IN POSSESSION.
NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The following telegram was sent to Governor Hill this morning: "New York, Aug. 11. To Hon.
D. B. Hill, Governor of the State of New York, Albany, N.Y.: Captain Michael Auer, commanding the militia at our De-Witt yards, near Syracuse, and who has been there for the past 24 hours, notifies the Sheriff of Onondaga county that he has been directed by the commanding general to suspend operations until the arrival of Major-General Farnsworth, who has been ordered there to investigate. The fact is that the strikers and rioters have now been in possession of our property at De Witt for twenty-four hours. They have prevented our using or occupying it. As far as I can ascertain little or no action has been taken by the authorities to protect our property, or to permit us to take possession. The Sheriff of Onondaga county was appealed to on Saturday. I ask that you will cause such prompt action to be taken as will permit us to operate the road. (Signed) H. WALTER WEBB, third vice-president."

At 1:15 p. m. Vice President Webb received the following reply from Governor Hill's military secretary: "Your despatch to Governor Hill is at hand. I am directed to say that General Farnsworth was sent to Syracuse to investigate the situation and report. It is desirable that official authentic information should be obtained before action is taken. You may rest assured that the State authorities will act promptly and vigorously in protecting property and preventing violence. The function of the military force should not be misunderstood, however. It is not their business to operate railroads or interfere in behalf of either party to the controversy, but only when invoked to act in aid of the local authorities in suppressing violence and protecting property. They are not expected to do more police duty, and are not to discharge those functions, which belong more properly to a sheriff's posse. The power of the civil authorities should be fully applied before resort is had to a military force. The governor desires that you keep him fully advised as to developments. (Signed) E.
T. Judson, colonel and military secretary."

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Beware of Poisoners.
CALCUTTA, Aug. 10.—In more than half the railroad stations here, huge placards are displayed saying, "Beware of Poisoners."

A detailed warning is also given to travelers against accepting hospitalities from natives or purchasing drinks or eta-bles of any kind. These precautions are rendered necessary by the fact that organized bands of poisoners have infested the railways, peddling fruit, cakes, drinks, etc., to passengers, chiefly at stations. Their wares are poisoned and scores of persons have met death at their hands. Moreover, the inhabitants of villages themselves have taken up the thread and poisoned those whom they have received as guests. In these latter cases the object appears to be to murder, but in the former it can only be simply a desire to murder, since the poisoners have no opportunity to rob the bodies of their victims. A perfect mania for such crimes has for some time prevailed on nearly all the routes of travel throughout India, and in spite of the police the horrible trade is still pursued.

used.

were killed by the bursting of a steam pipe on the Russian man-of-war Tebesin.
Among the victims was Prince Khilkoff.

The World Honors a Great Stenographer.
MEXICO, Aug. 10.—A monument to the stenographer, Gabelsberg, was unveiled in this city to-day. The burgomaster and delegates of shorthand societies of Europe and New York delivered addresses, all eulogizing Gabelsberg and his system.

The Buenos Ayres Jubilee.
BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 10.—The rejoicings over the fall of Celmán ended with a number of mass meetings, at which speeches were made in honor of Senor Alem, president of the Republic. The minister of the interior has begun negotiations for re-transfer of the drainage and city waterworks from an English company to the government. Forecasts of the financial policy of the government are untrustworthy. The finance minister has not yet finished enough of the balance sheet to show the financial position of the nation.

land is in a feeble condition and is confined are without foundation.

(From our own Correspondent.) OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 12.—Anderson, engineer of the Marine Department, has returned from an inspection of the fog signals and lighthouses in the Gulf and Straits of Belle Isle. He says: "The lights were found in good condition, but the fog alarms are capable of improvement. He will make a report to-day."

A letter was received from Italy, to-day, from Wm. Smith, deputy minister of marine, before leaving Rome. He received the Pope's blessing.

mission to excursion steamers to pass

Captain Carme, of the Second West rifle matches next month.

The Dept. of Agriculture learned to-day that the ranch season in the McLeod district of Alberta is as good as last year. The storms in March and April killed a large percentage of the calf crop. The crops in the Calgary district are reported in splendid condition. The Lister Kaye farms have not done well.

The Customs department has made further seizures of liquors on the Lower St.

urbs according to the recent census

The People's Bank of Halifax has submitted a petition to the government claiming damages for loss of the alleged willful refusal of Chief Justice Macdonald, of the Supreme court of Nova Scotia, to deliver judgment in favor of the bank in its suit against some of its debtors until too late to recover the debts. The bank claims the government should recon to it $21,762, which it alleges was lost through the delay in the delivery of the Chief Justice's decision in its favor.

Six members of the Bisleigh team have returned home. Their total cash winnings were £370, the largest amount but one ever won by a Canadian team.

In an interview, General Middleton complains bitterly of the treatment he has received from Canada. He says he cannot understand what induced Blake to make such a vicious attack upon him. He thinks Hayer had for being the first person who suggested that the Bremner furs be confiscated. Middleton leaves for England in a few days.

THE WELSH STRIKES.
LONDON, Aug. 11.—Each succeeding day since the beginning of the great Welsh strike has witnessed an increase in the number of men involved and the growth of prospects that the strikers will finally win their fight. The employees of the Welsh railway are not included in the strike, but have subscribed a shilling a week each from their wages to the support of the men who are out. The strikers are certainly not lacking sympathy, as is evident by the fact that 30,000 colliers from the Rhondada district marched to Cardiff to-day, with bands of music, banners and flags, to attest their support of the strikers' cause. It is estimated that the strikers have already lost £40,000 in wages, and the masters have suffered still more severely through the stoppage of their business.

AN ATTACK OF GOUT.
The Duke of Clarence and Avondale (Prince Albert Victor of Wales) is suffering from an attack of genuine gout.

THE MUTINY AT CHATHAM.
Details of the notorious conduct of the soldiers at Chatham and Exeter have been officially communicated to the Duke of Cambridge, who is in Germany and the commander-in-chief of the British forces is expected to return forthwith to investigate the cause of discontent which, to such an alarm extent, exists among several of the foremost military organizations. The number of desertions, because of the tyranny of non-commissioned officers, and from other causes, is increasing. Police are scouring the country for deserters, and several have already been apprehended and returned to their regiments and confined.

DAMAGES FOR SLANDER.
The mayor of Newcastle has just been muled in the sum of $250 on a suit brought against him by a man who was employed by Henry M. Stanley in the capacity of a valet. Upon the advice of the Mayor, Mr.
Stanley dismissed the man from his service, whereupon the man brought action against the mayor for slander, obtaining the full amount of damages for which he sued.

SORROW FOR CARDINAL MANNING.
The residence of Cardinal Newman was besieged throughout the day with anxious inquiries as to his condition, and after his death the number of persons calling to express their sorrow was even greater.

BENEFIT FALLING WALLS.
At Crefold, Rhénish Prussia, to-day a building containing 50 persons fell during a terrible storm, burying the entire number beneath the ruins. Thirteen dead bodies and 20 wounded men and women have been taken out, and 12 are known to be buried under tons of debris. The voices of some of the buried ones can be plainly heard by the men attempting their rescue.

PRIVILEGES OF MISSIONARIES.
In the House of Lords this evening, Lord Salisbury stated that the agreement with France maintained the rights and privileges of missionaries in Madagascar, and the freedom of religious teaching under modern doctrine. France claimed of the countries south of Algeria and Tunis the same principles. France, he stated, also claimed the country south of Algeria and Tunis, and on the same principle the English Niger company could claim the territories behind the present sphere of operations.

"LEAD KINDLY LIGHT."

Death of the Venerable Cardinal Newman—Short Sketch of his Life and Work.

One of the Most Eminent Scholars and Illustrious Divines of the Present Day.

Our cablegrams announce the death, in his 90th year, of His Eminence Cardinal John Henry Newman, one of the most eminent scholars and illustrious divines of the present day. When a student at Oxford and during his career as a clergyman of the Church of England, he highly distinguished himself by his intellectual powers and logical grip upon things scientific and religious. But in 1843 he became associated with Dr. Pusey as the recognized leader of the High Church party, being one of the principal contributors to the well-known "Tracts for the Times," which were declared to have annulled the broad lines of demarcation between the Roman Catholic and English Churches. Prior to this he had been regarded as having predilections in favour of the Low, or rather the Broad church party; but almost at a bound he, by a remarkable course of sermons and lectures at Oxford, as well as by his contributions to the "Hymnology of the English Church, rose to the joint leadership of the party which Rev. Dr. Pusey had that far directed. As a step preliminary to his final separation from the Anglican communion he established an ascetic community at Littlemore, over which he presided for three or four years. In 1845 he made his final break, being received into the Roman Catholic Church; nine years later being appointed Rector of the Catholic University in Dublin, a position which he resigned in 1858 to establish a school for the sons of Roman Catholic gentry near Birmingham. Contrary to the general expectation he was a strong believer in the doctrine of Papal infallibility, and in 1879 was proclaimed a Cardinal Deacon by Pope Leo XIII. But for his age he would, no doubt, have become a more prominent figure in the church of his adoption, albeit in his sermons and controversial writings, together with his poems—among the latter of which was the beautiful and pathetic, "Lead, Kindly Light!"— he maintained the high rank

During June the Japanese post and telegraph revenue was $558,937, a decrease of $19,190 as compared with the previous month, and an increase of $50,288 as compared with the corresponding period of last year.

It was announced that all the Government officials elected as members of Parliament, excepting Mr. Mutsu, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, were about to resign their positions under Government.

In view of the ordeal through which the Japanese Budget has to go in Parliament, the greatest care is being exercised in its preparation. The Mainichi states it has been four times on the Cabinet table and has been again sent back to the Finance officials of the various Departments.

The question of Government aid to the direct export of raw silk to America, has been under consideration for some time, and it is announced that the Department of Agriculture and Commerce has decided to continue its assistance. In consequence Mr. Sonoda, President of the Yokohama Shokun Ginko, has offered to renew the financial arrangement with the Doshin Kwaisha (Yokohama Raw Silk Co.) and has contracted with the company to grant an advance of money.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Tokyo Stock Exchange a net profit of $75,829 was reported, which was increased to $76,082 by the sum of $253 brought over from the last account. Of this it was decided to place $9,000 to the reserve fund, disburse $11,000 in remuneration and for expenses of officials, and to pay in dividend to the shareholders the sum of $28 per share, being at the rate of 57 per cent. per annum; $82 was carried over to next account.

Arrival of the City of Peking from Hong Kong Her Passenger List—Interesting Information.

Yesterday about noon the S. S. City of Peking from the East arrived at the outer wharf with a full cargo and passenger list. She only drew 24 feet; but her captain being new to the port was unwilling to bring her alongside although the pilot had received instructions to do so. According to the ship's log, which was obtained from her purser Mr. J. V. Comport, who years ago used to visit Victoria in the steamer Dakota, she sailed from Hong Kong July 19th, at 2.26 p. m., and arrived at Kobe July 24th at 6 a. m. She sailed thence July 25th, at 5.57 p. m., arriving at Yokohama July 26th at 10.30 p. m. She left that port July 29th at 10.23 a. m., and arrived at Victoria, August 10th at 11.30 a. m. She had a smooth sea, and light winds, with dark foggy weather the entire trip. The cabin passengers for Victoria were Miss Schaffner, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Davis, W. B. Hall and W. S. Kahnweiler. She had on board some 300 Chinese of whom 103 were for Victoria. The City of Peking is an iron vessel of 5,079 tons and is commanded by Capt. J. M. Cavarly. She is 423 feet long and is handsomely and well appointed in every particular.

Among her San Francisco passengers was Rev. Bishop Newman, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church of the United States, who had been to that country attending the session of the Japanese conference. There were upon the conference list about fifty missionaries, while including male and female teachers, English speaking and foreign, there were about 60. They were establishing a college at Tokio, towards which he (Dr. Newman) had given $5,000. Dr. Newman spoke of the increasing success of Christian and educational efforts; but noted with regret that only half the school population were being educated. The system prevailing was too rigorous and exacting; and had begun at the top instead of at the bottom. In New England and the rest of the American states educational effort had been begun with the elements of reading and writing but in Japan they had commenced at the top with almost equal the to university education. The feeling which prevailed was hopeful, although there was some unsettledness. The Japanese were desirous of progressing after European methods. Already they had made great advancement, and in a few years it would be possible to note great strides in that direction. He noted great improvements in Japan since his visit there seven years ago, the country was now fully open to civilization. He regarded the political revolution which had taken place as one of leaders rather than of principle, although the ideas upon which it had taken place were those of progress.

Rev. D. V. McInturff, Methodist missionary at Tokio, who has been three years in the country, was also among the passengers. He was returning with his wife, who had a severe affection of the eyes, from which strangers were apt to suffer. The Japanese mission field was an exceedingly hopeful one, and it was much to his regret that he had been compelled to temporarily leave it. He spoke of the city of Tokio as being very beautiful, many of the buildings being very fine and of modern architecture.

Miss Schaffner, a lady missionary laboring at Canton, China, under the direction of the United Brethren, whose she had been for some years, was also one of the passengers. She was on her way to Portland, Oregon, for which she left last night by the City of Kingston. All her relations with the Chinese had led her to form a most favorable impression regarding them. Changes were working there way among the people in the direction of moral and national advancement, much progress being made in the mechanical arts. Although the changes so far had been rapid they would be much more extensive and rapid in the future. Six or seven years ago there had been no such thing as a launch on the Canton river, the first that was introduced being set upon by the people and broken up, as they said it had no wife and children to support, and therefore ought not to be allowed.

A gentleman standing by remarked that it was something upon this principle that the whole people upon this continent were dealing with the Chinese.

Miss Schaffner continued that now there were four large vessels and thirty launches plying on the Canton river, and in every way that the Chinese were not going to be left behind. She predicted that China would not be long falling into line with our civilization as she was making progress upon proper lines. Although they had had gloomy weather all the way out from Hong Kong, with the exception of three delightful days soon after leaving Hong Kong, the passage had been rapid and pleasant. This was, however, the first day they had seen the sun for some time.

Mr. C. S. Fay, a large merchant of San Francisco, said he had gone out on a pleasure trip, and had been more than delighted with his experiences.

Mr. W. N. Kahnweiler, a merchant of New York, remarked to THE COLONIST reporter that his appetite for travel had been so much wetted by his trip to the East that he felt obliged to complete his adventures by crossing the Rockies over the C.P.R. to satisfy himself as to what the Dominion of Canada was like.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Davis, of San Francisco, said they had thoroughly enjoyed themselves in the East, and proposed to take in the Yellowstone country before they returned.

Mr. James J. Raymond, of the firm of A. A. Vantine & Co., Broadway, New York, remarked upon the variety and value of the productions of Japan, about which there was no go back. He had, he said, secured a most valuable collection of curios, of which his house were extensive importers. Before long American trade with Japan and China would be immense and most profitable. It was continually growing, large as it already was.

The thanks of THE COLONIST are due to Chief Engineer McClure and Purser Comfort of the steamer City of Peking for late files of Eastern papers.

A TERRIBLE AND ALARMING HABIT

By Scott F. Hershey, Ph. D., Washington, D.C.

The Episcopal Recorder.

Woman lives longer than man, goes insane less frequently, commits suicide one-third as often, makes one-tenth the demand on the public purse for support in jails, prisons, almshouses, and in every regard manifests potentiality above that of men.

This is an observed fact in the generation now passing, and it will be yet more so in the generation now coming on. The physical and mental fibre of the young men is weakening. Contributory to this is the dangerous habit, and the growing one, of cigarette smoking. The hour is come for a serious consideration of this evil. Parents should be apprised of the danger awaiting their boys. School boards should instruct their teachers to a vigorous crusade. Demand should be made upon legislative bodies to enact laws to stay the wide spread break-down now going on.

If this article should fall into the hands of any young man addicted to the habit, I beseech him to read carefully, and ponder seriously; and I would have him know that the statements I make are substantiated by most alarming facts. Let me make an appeal to facts.

Last year the international revenue from cigarettes was over a million dollars. The increase over the year before was $145,000. And this indicates the increase of the consumption of the deadly article. During the year boys and young men consumed two and a quarter million of these little paper rolls of poison. There are multitudes of boys, not yet grown, who smoke from twenty to sixty a day. While the population of the country was increasing about a million and a half during the year, the consumption of cigarettes increased nearly three hundred million.

All cigarettes contain, according to Laffin, a competent scientist and chemist, five distinct poisons. Three of these are the most deadly oils, in the paper wrapper, one in the nicotine, and the third, and worst in the flavoring. The other poisons are saltpetre and opium. The smoker draws the smoke into his lungs. A brown stain is being deposited continually upon his throat and lungs, and it is a combined coating made of all the five poisons. In time this frequently stains the very skin, showing that the whole system is permeated by it.

The main reason why the cigarette obtains so fatal a power over young men is because of the opium in it. The little paper roll seems to soothe, when in fact it is paralyzing the very force of life. A confirmed cigarette smoker shows the appearance and actions of the opium eater. Misery, insanity, or death, one or the other, is sure to result. Look at some of the recent occurrences connected with this dangerous habit. A dozen boys made insane by cigarette smoking, have, within a short time, been confined in the Napa, California, hospital for the insane. Walter Fletcher died at Louisville the other day of cigarette poisoning. Brightest boy in his class, he began a year ago to smoke, and recently had been smoking fifty to sixty a day. He was stricken with heart disease directly brought on by smoking. A young man of sixteen died in Philadelphia. His habit was to smoke twenty a day. A post-mortem showed that death was due to congestion of brain from cigarette poison. A fine young man of Troy drops dead. After death one of his veins bursts—the blood was black as ink. Several physicians said it was cigarette poisoning.

Such things are of daily record, they are alarming. I was recently speaking to a bright young man from the South. He appeared to be a noble youth. He seemed wholly unconscious of the ruin to which he is going. It made me sad as I thought of what was before him, if the habit is not speedily broken.

A cigarette bill has recently passed the Georgia legislature. It makes a crime to sell or give a cigarette, or cigarette paper to any minor. Illinois has such a law also. The city of Frankfort, Ky., prohibits the entire sale of cigarettes. This shows how it is regarded by careful legislators.

Business managers of large commercial enterprises begin to understand that the habit incapacitates for business. A prominent business house in an Eastern city has a sign over the head cashier's desk, "No cigarette smoking by our men. As a result, a couple of hundred clerks are said to be superior to those of other houses in the same line of business. Young man, write to me if you are willing to stop the habit.

AT REST NOW.

Death of John Boyle O'Reilly, the Irish Poet, From an Overdose of Chloral.

He Sought Relief From Insomnia by Taking an Opiate—Sketch of His Eventful Life.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—John Boyle O'Reilly, the poet and editor of the Boston Pilot, died this afternoon. Death is supposed to have been caused by an overdose of chloroform, taken for insomnia. O'Reilly had been suffering for several days from insomnia. During the past week he had slept but little. Last night his wife was ill, and he called Dr. Litchfield to attend her. The doctor went to the house and prescribed for her, leaving a bottle of medicine. At 2 o'clock this morning O'Reilly again called the doctor, and said that part of the medicine left for Mrs. O'Reilly had been spilled. The doctor then gave him a single dose to take to her. As he left the doctor's, O'Reilly said he felt extremely tired, and if Mrs. O'Reilly went to sleep he would take a little something himself to see if he could not get a few hours' sleep. At 4 o'clock Mrs. O'Reilly awoke and found her husband missing. She went down stairs and found him lying on the floor in an unconscious condition. A doctor was immediately called, but O'Reilly expired in a short time. It is thought he must have taken a dose of chloral to make him sleep and took an overdose. Mrs. O'Reilly and her four daughters are nearly prostrated with grief.

John Boyle O'Reilly visited Washington last March, and lectured in Seattle on the evening of the 10th. Some time previous the Post-Intelligencer published a biographical sketch of the poet, from the pen of his friend and admirer, P. A. O'Farrell. Following are extracts from this article:

"Dumas in his wildest flights of fancy never conceived anything so romantic as the story of O'Reilly's life. Still in the very prime of life, of superb physique, and of robust health, the handsome, fascinating poet would make an ideal Monte Christo for another ideal Dumas. The dark light of those strange, lustrous eyes, and the tones of that rich, melodious voice draw to O'Reilly the hearts of men."

"John Boyle O'Reilly was born in June, 1844, on the banks of the Boyne, in Ireland. Born in a country as lovely as a poet's dream, beside a river whose shores were lined with monuments of Ireland's glories."

"He was not yet 20 when events occurred that made him live a life time. A sudden impulse seized him, he would don the uniform of the English soldier and learn in the ranks the art of war, that he might afterwards use it against the hereditary enemy of his race. He joined the Tenth Hussars, commanded by Colonel Baker, and in a few months he became the hero and idol of one of the crack cavalry regiments of Great Britain. But the gay, light-hearted, fascinating young trooper was at the same time a dark conspirator, and he soon enrolled every Irishman in the regiment as enthusiastic Fenians."

"His treason was soon discovered. A court-martial was summoned, and in June, 1866, John Boyle O'Reilly was found guilty of high treason and sentenced to be shot. O'Reilly's youth pleaded strongly on his behalf, and the government commuted the sentence of death into one of penal servitude for life, a sentence which was afterwards reduced to 20 years' penal servitude in Australia. His splendid constitution and powerful physique enabled him to bear the frightful labor imposed upon the convicts, but his goalers grew fearful of the ceaseless gaiety of the man. He was to them a mystery, so they hired him out to a ticket-of-leave man, whose duty it was to work him like a beast of burden. After about a year he made his escape, friends procuring the service of Captain Gifford of the Gazette for the rescue of the fugitive. At the appointed time the ship sailed out of Perth, passed along the coast and picked O'Reilly and Bowman up. The Police Gazette of April, 1869, contained a notice of the escaped convict, John B. O'Reilly, and described him as 'an Irishman of healthy appearance, 5 feet, 7½ inches high, black hair, brown eyes, oval visage and dark complexion.'"

"Despatches were sent round the world to the ships of the British navy to scour the sea and capture the runaway convict dead or alive. Meanwhile he stood on the deck over which floated the stars and stripes, and his gallant rescuer bade him be at ease, for he would guarantee that the Union Jack would never more flutter over him. For seven months he wandered in the Gazette over southern seas. He lauded at various islands, and learned those legends of the sailors which he afterwards wove into his immortal 'Songs of the Southern Seas.' Once only did run serious risk of recapture. English marines boarded the whaler when she put in to water at the island of Rodriguez. They no sooner touched the deck than they seized Bowman and took him on shore. O'Reilly at the time was standing beside the captain but Bowman's villainous look betrayed him. Bowman, once on shore, endeavored to make good terms for himself by revealing all and the marines returned to the whaler before dusk. This time, O'Reilly, to avoid the complications that might follow, consented to hide under the captain's berth, while the sailors, who loved him dearly, threw his hat and a grinding stone over the ship's side and shouted, 'Man overboard!' Careful search failed to discover him and the British commander sent a cablegram to London announcing the fact that the convict O'Reilly had been drowned while attempting to escape from the officers of the law. This news mitigated the rigorous pursuit, and Captain Gifford transferred him to a ship bound to Liverpool, whence he hoped to reach America. The captain had also loaned him $150, and with that the fugitive succeeded in reaching Liverpool, hiding there for a week, and then taking passage on a steamer bound for Philadelphia. From there he went to Boston, where he arrived at the close of 1869. He was then in his 26th year, and like Horatio, without any revenue save his good spirits."

"His first acquaintance there was P. A. Collins. He, too, was an exile from the unhappy land that had given them both birth. Between these two men there sprang up a friendship as tender, as passionate and as fond as ever poet or dramatist painted. It was through Collins' influence that O'Reilly first became connected with the Pilot, and subsequently became editor-in-chief and part owner of it."

CANADA AT BISLEY.

Her Representatives Well Sustain Their Previous Record—Exceptionally Good Shooting.

According to all accounts the Canadian team under Col. Prior did excellent work at Bisley and, as the Canadian Gazette, in its last received issue, said "though the blue riband of the meeting went to an Englishman, Canadians may pride themselves upon the fact that their representatives well sustained the national fame. The standard of shooting generally was distinctly above the average. Despite the astonishingly high shooting, Canadians have secured probably their best record in the Queen's." Last year it will be remembered there were two Canadians in the coveted last stage of that competition, and of them Q. M. Sergt. Ogg was one. This year he again showed his prowess and at the end of the first stage stood 24th, with the excellent aggregate of 95; and, with one exception, secured the only highest possible at 600 yards. At the last stage the Canadians stood thus—Lieut. Smith having gained the first Canadian place with an excellent third stage score:

	1st Stage	2nd Stage	3rd Stage	Total	Points
Lieut. Smith	91	105	62	258	412
33 Capt. Bishop	92	103	61	256	412
38 Q. M. Sergt. Ogg	95	101	53	249	410
62 Sergt. Hall	92	101	55	248	408

In the first stage of the Queen's, Lieut. Hora stood 303rd, and won £2 with 88 points, while Lieut. Manning stood 365th, and won £2 with 88 points.

At the conclusion of the Queen's, the champion, Sergt. Bates, of the 1st Warwickshire, was chaired around the camp. He reached the Canadian enclosure just as the team had been photographed. No time, however, was lost in forming into line under command of Lieut. Colonel Prior, and the adjutant, Major Todd, and very hearty were the cheers with which "the conquering hero" was greeted. As soon as the applause had subsided, Col. Prior made a neat little speech. He said:

"I wish to say one word on behalf of the Canadian team and the Canadian people whom I have the honor of representing here to-day. We have come a good many thousands of miles to compete with the representatives of that Mother Country from whose stock most of us are descended, and on whose soil, indeed, many of us first saw the light. We have done our very best to win the prize that has fallen to Sergt. Bates and made him the proudest man in England to-day. (Cheers.) But although we have not been fortunate enough to secure for a Canadian place upon the chair where Sergt. Bates is now seated, you will all agree that the Canadian team has done very well (renewed cheers); and we only hope that Sergt. Bates will take the same pride in the position he has won as we Canadians do in the honors they have fallen to us. I trust that for many years the Canadian team will be found taking up its place in this camp and competing in friendship and brotherly rivalry with the representatives of the Mother Land and the other Colonies. (Loud cheers.)"

These remarks were greeted with the utmost enthusiasm by the large crowd of onlookers, who joined very cordially in the cheering for the Canadian team, which the Warwickshire representatives led off.

The inspection of the Canadians by the Duke of Cambridge was a notable event. H. R. H. was accompanied by General Lord Wolsley, and under the guidance of Col. Prior and Major Todd made a careful inspection of the Canadian and Cape teams, who were drawn up together. After addressing each map and alluding in complimentary terms to the medals which many of them wore, he said he was pleased once more to welcome the Canadian and the Cape teams at the first meeting on Bisley Common, and especially pleased was he to learn from them that they appreciated the advantages of the new ranges and the general arrangements at the new camp. There might, it was true, be less picknicking at Bisley than there was at Wimbledon, but that was not an entire disadvantage, for the shooting would no doubt be far more solid. From all he could learn, the feeling of sympathy between this country and the Colonies was growing in strength each year. He rejoiced in the growth, and hoped to see the day when some measure of federation between the various parts of the Empire, or at least some greater advance towards Imperial Unity than now existed.

Three cheers having been cordially given by the team, His Royal Highness and General Wolsley retired to the tent and examined with interest the attractive photographs and other mementoes of the Dominion with which the Canadian quarters are enriched.

The "Standard" cup was competed for by teams of twelve, limited to one each of efficient volunteers or yeomen to represent England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales respectively, one from the militia or efficient volunteers of each colony or dependency, and one to represent India. The competition involved individual firing for a minute, advance and volley firing, and so forth, at distances from 700 yards to 300 yards. The target consisted of a picture—designed, it is believed, by Colonel Marsden's wife—of a field gun and two artillermen, of which, however, the bull's-eye was not a gunner's heart, but the gun itself. England won by a large number of marks, but Canada and Jersey obtained a victory over Ireland and Scotland. Five teams entered, the first to shoot being the Jersey men, followed by the representatives of England, Canada, Ireland and Scotland in this order. The English team won easily with 847 points.

That the Canadians came second is no discredit to them, when it is remembered how remarkably strong the English team was. It included such well-known marks-men as Sergt. Bates, Birmingham; H. Dodd, Liverpool; Lieut. Hart, Birmingham; J. C. Homer, H.A.C.; Sergt. Parry, Chester; and Color-Sergt. Taylor, London Rifle Brigade. The scores made by the several teams were:

	England	33	30	42	163	817
	Canada	43	47	27	96	677
	Jersey	42	40	40	103	688
	Ireland	38	38	38	121	594
	Scotland	32	31	38	106	610

PROVISIONAL BOARD OF TRUSTEES—T. W. Carter, John Irving, J. C. Bales, Geo. A. Perrin, and John A. Andrew.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and extending the well-known and old established business of "The Vancouver Ale, Porter and Steam Beer Brewery," in the City of Victoria.

The promoters confidently expect, by the aid of capital and influence, to largely extend the business and introduce the production of Lager Beer, for which there is a large and growing demand throughout the Province. They will also shortly commence distilling.

The quantity of Lager Beer passed through the Custom House, Victoria, B. C., for the six months ended December 31st, 1889, was as follows, i. e., 13,430 gallons in bottles, 12,705 gallons in casks.

The quantity of spirits passed through the Inland Revenue Office for the year ended 30th June last was 6,019,33 proof gallons, and probably an addition of 50 per cent. may be made to this for lots entered duty paid.

Shares are offered to the public for subscription by a deposit of 50 per cent. per share on allotment, and the balance by assessments as required; no one assessment to exceed 10 per cent. of the subscribed capital.

Forms of application may be had of the promoters or secretary.

THE QUESTIONS AT ISSUE.

There are newspapers in this province which are doing their best to turn the unfortunate trouble in Wellington to their special advantage. They are posing as the champions of labor, and they are trying to convince the miners and others that there is a combination in this province, the object of which is to deny workmen the right to combine in order to advance their own interests. These papers are resorting to falsehood and to all sorts of tricks to produce the impression that the Government is hostile to the workmen. The News-Advertiser declares that the Government is entirely subservient to the orders of a "clique of monopolists." That paper also says:

"With the exception of one journal at Victoria and one at Nanaimo, there is not a newspaper in the province that will venture and come out boldly and join us in denouncing the combination which at Wellington is seeking to prevent the acceptance of those principles that have been admitted in every country on the globe, which possesses a free and popular form of government."

The combination which the News-Advertiser denounces is a creation of the editor's own imagination. It has no existence anywhere else. He has created it in order furiously to attack it and to make himself appear the champion of the workingman.

Miners and other working men are under no disabilities in this province. They have all the rights and privileges that working men have in any country which possesses a "free and popular form of government." They possess the right to combine for their own advantage." Their Unions and Associations and Assemblies can make what regulations they please. The law places no bar in the way of labor combinations adding to their numbers. They are free to meet in secret session and to hold public meetings. They can publish anything which they consider calculated to advance their own interests. There is no church, or congregation, or corporate body in the province which has greater privileges and a wider range of liberty than trade combinations. The championship of the champions can gain nothing for the workingmen in this respect, for there is really nothing to gain. That endeavor then to make workingmen of this province believe that they do not possess the rights and privileges that workingmen in other countries possess is therefore neither more nor less than mischievous drivel, which every member of a union and every man who attends a workingman's meeting, knows to be false.

There is not a newspaper that we know of which has published one syllable in favor of withholding from workingmen the rights and privileges that the same class enjoys in other countries, and we have not seen it as much as hinted that those rights and privileges should be in any shape or way restricted. The accusations against the press are stupidly false. We are quite certain that the newspapers which the News-Advertiser meanly traduces would be the very first to denounce and protest against depriving workingmen of any privilege they enjoy.

The News-Advertiser says: "In Wellington to-day the battle that is being fought is whether workingmen shall or shall not have the right to combine for their own protection and advantage." The workingmen of Wellington and every other town and settlement of the Province already possess that right and are exercising it for their own advantage. There is no sense in saying that the men are fighting for what they already possess. The strikers are members of trade combinations formed for their own protection, and no one has interfered with them in the lawful exercise of their right.

The strikers possess the right which the Advertiser says that they are fighting for. They, as members of a labor union, have stated the conditions on which they are willing to work. No one has said they are wrong in dictating their own terms. Are the mine owners free to accept or reject those terms? Will the News-Advertiser say that employers are bound to accept the terms of workmen? We hardly think it will go so far as that. Well, if they refuse, what then? Is the Government to step in and say to them, "You must accept those terms or other terms which we shall dictate." If that is the case, what becomes of the freedom of the employer? Is he to be the slave of the Government put in power and kept in power by workmen? It would seem that some such notion as this is floating about in the muddled brain of our contemporary.

If the workman is free to ask what remuneration he considers fair, and to prescribe such other conditions as he considers convenient, and the employer is also free to accept or reject the offer of the workmen, what is to be done when they cannot agree? That is the question which is at issue in Wellington and in many other places. The men can refuse to work except on their own terms. That is all right. The employer then has nothing more to do with them. He cannot force them to work for him and he cannot punish them for not working. Should not the workmen then stand in the same relation to the employer? Does not justice require that they should leave him severely alone? Are the workmen justified in annoying him and the new workmen he employs in any way? They have exercised their own liberty in refusing to work, have they any right to deter other men from working? These, it seems to us, are the questions to be decided in Wellington:—

Were Dunsmuir and Sons free to reject the miners' terms?

Having rejected those terms, are they free to open their mines again?

Are the men whom they employ free to work without being annoyed?

Are processions and parades avowedly intended to shame them into leaving their work lawful assemblages?

It must be remembered that the freedom of the miners has not been restricted in the slightest degree. Up to the point of their interfering with the men who were employed in their places, nothing was said or done against them. They have exercised their own rights without let or hindrance. Can they be allowed to interfere with others in the exercise of their lawful rights? It would appear to us that this is not a difficult question for sensible and fair-minded men to decide.

With the wisdom or unwisdom of the course which the Messrs. Dunsmuir have seen fit to pursue we, as public journalists, have nothing to do. It is not our function to dictate to men how they shall conduct their private affairs. The only matter for us to consider is whether they, and other employers, are free to make what bargains they can with workmen, and whether they and those whom they employ are to be protected in the exercise of their lawful rights?

MUCH ADO ABOUT LITTLE.

The organ of the Opposition, in its search for ammunition, found in Saturday's COLONIST a local paragraph which it considered of sufficient importance to make the subject of a leading article. It is quite welcome to all the capital it can make out of that paragraph. The reporter, who had no idea that such importance would be attached to his words, said: "Having safely locked up the provincial lands, Mr. Vernon can well afford to cross the Atlantic and enjoy a season of rest and recreation." Our contemporary draws from this harmless sentence several extraordinary conclusions. It concludes in the first place that the lands are not locked up from speculators only (for it was only against them that the key was turned), but against bona fide settlers. It also concludes that there is no one to do the business of the land office in Mr. Vernon's absence. From these conclusions, both absurd and not warranted by the language of its text, the Times draws a number of inferences equally absurd. If the Times is so ignorant as to suppose that bona fide settlers will not be able to obtain land while Mr. Vernon is away on his holiday, and if it is so phenomenally stupid as to believe that the land office will be shut up for want of some one to take Mr. Vernon's place for the next few weeks, we beg to assure it that it is altogether astray. The land office will be open to all but speculative purchasers, and there will be a gentleman in the office duly authorized to perform the duties of Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works. This assurance will no doubt ease our contemporary's mind and dissipate its suspicions. It is amusing to notice the annoyance that the Government's new departure has given our contemporary. Any allusion to the Government's land policy, even one made incidentally by a light-hearted reporter, ruffles its temper and causes it to rave in a most pitiable manner. For the credit of Victoria journalism our contemporary should try to exercise a little command over his temper. Such twaddle as the article we are commenting on would disgrace even the Vancouver News-Advertiser.

B. C. UNIVERSITY.

A meeting of the 125 "Graduates of British Universities," who have registered as members of convocation under the "B. C. University Act, 1890," has been called for the 26th inst., and will take place in the Hall of the Legislative Assembly, Victoria, for the purpose of electing three members to act as representatives on the Council of the University; and it may be to discuss other matters. On Friday last we gave an analysis of the members of convocation who had registered, and in doing so we pointed out that many clergymen of the Church of England and many clergymen of the Presbyterian church, had been debarred, though for very different reasons, from registering as members of convocation. The act (Mr. Duck's) under which the registration took place, defined very rigidly that none but graduates of British universities could register; and that barred out all "Literates" in the Church of England—that is all who had not become graduates of universities. These "Literates" are clergymen who have begun study late in life, after pursuing some other profession, or trade, and have not been to a University. A couple of centuries ago "Literates" existed in the Church of England, and they were ordered then "to wear upon their surplices, instead of hoods, some decent tippets of black—so it be not silk."

In later years however, "Literates" of St. Aidan's, Birkenhead; of St. Augustine's, Canterbury; and of St. Bees, (Hivites), Cumberland; &c. &c. &c., have been by a resolution of the Upper House of Convocation, and by general consent, relegated to the use of "Black Hoods but not Silk." Clergymen and other graduates who have had a University education are entitled to wear brilliant and gaudy hoods. Master of Arts (M. A.) of Oxford in England, and of St. Andrews, in Scotland, wears black silk lined with white silk; an M. A. of Cambridge in England and Edinburgh and Aberdeen, Scotland, wears black silk lined with white silk; and Glasgow wears black silk lined with bell-heather red silk. Thus, then, the status of the University of a clergyman can be easily fixed and it can be seen at once if he is a "Literate" or not.

On the other hand, there are no "Literates" among Presbyterian clergymen. Before a student can become a Presbyterian minister he must attend the "Arts Course" of a British university for four years, and AFTER that a Divinity Course for three years, making in all seven years of training for the ministry. So then, all men of ordinary sense know that a Presbyterian minister must have gone through a thorough course of university training, and, except in foreign countries, the degree of M.A. (there are no B.A.'s in Scotland) is useless, because every Presbyterian minister could have it for paying for it—inasmuch as all must have qualified for it.

Money at the City Hall.

It is not often that a man finds himself troubled with the complaint which the city treasurer is at present suffering from. He is actually looking for people who want money; all the cheques are made out and signed; and still the people won't call for them.

St. James' Social.

A social will be given by the ladies of St. James', this evening, at the Cathedral Sunday school room. A very choice programme of vocal and instrumental music has been prepared, and those who wish to enjoy a thoroughly pleasant evening may do so for the small sum of 25c. This charge will include ice-cream and infirmum.

Serious Affair.

An affair that nearly terminated fatally occurred yesterday. A young man, who might have been better employed, picked up a large stone off the street and fired it with all his strength at an unoffending cat opposite. A lady was passing at the time and instead of striking the cat, the stone hit a board fence alongside, on which were the boards of a range, stove and house furnishings, at midman and meely's, 70 Yates street.

His Hand in the Mangle.

A boy named Imbert, employed at the steam laundry, had the misfortune, yesterday morning, to have his hand crushed in the mangle. He was doing something to the machine, which was working, when his fingers were caught in the roller. Fortunately Mr. Roland was close by and by promptly throwing off the lever saved the lad from the loss of his entire hand. It is thought that it will not be necessary to amputate any of the fingers as the bones do not seem to be crushed.

Birth at Sea.

A birth occurred on board the Walla Walla, on the trip from San Francisco, a little girl entering into this troubled world while the steamship was off Crescent City. A ballot was taken on board and out of the several names submitted, that of Crescent Wallace was chosen—the former after Crescent City, and the latter after Capt. Wallace. A subscription was taken up on behalf of the little one, and $110 collected from the generous passengers. The mother is en route from Australia to Winnipeg.

Why Not Come in?

It is thought that considering the City of Tofo is only drawing about 23 feet her captain should have allowed her to be brought alongside the outer wharf where there was sufficient water for vessels of much deeper draught. Indeed her pilot, and he knows all about the harbor, had the necessary instructions and was ready to bring her in. It has, since the above was written, been explained that considering there were but few passengers or little or no cargo for Victoria, the captain concluded it was a saving of time not to come alongside the wharf, and therefore stayed out in the offing.

Paul Schulze and Party.

Paul Schulze and party on Sunday cruised along the coast to Oak Bay in his Naptha launch. Yesterday afternoon they visited the war ships at Esquimalt and fished for salmon with spoon bait. On Wednesday morning the launch will convey a party of gentlemen over to Port Crescent and return, arrangements having been made with the customs for this purpose. Mr. Schulze is president of the Victoria, Port Crescent and Chehalis railway, and visits the new city on the straits for the purpose of examining the works under way. Among Wednesday's party will be Mr. Spofford, of New York, who is Mr. Villard's representative while that gentleman is in Europe.

Beaten by a Barkeeper.

A few mornings since, about six o'clock, two men, one of whom has recently made himself unpleasantly public, were observed pursuing a man on the sidewalk of one of the leading streets of the city. It turned out that the unfortunate victim of the combined attack had been drinking heavily in a neighboring saloon, and refusing to leave, was thrown out by the barkeeper, who called in the assistance of the other party. Neither of them were, however, satisfied with putting the man out, but combined to beat him in a brutal manner. The affair is, it is said, being looked into and may yet reach the courts. It is disgraceful, however, that men should be allowed to buy liquor until they have lost all control of themselves and should then be outrageously beaten.

And Still They Come.

Another large party of Raymond-Whitcomb excursionists will arrive at Vancouver this week. They will stay over there a day, and then come over here to take passage by the Queen on her last trip to Alaska. The party, which is in charge of Mr. Bernard, comprises the following ladies and gentlemen:—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. White, Miss A. Aines, Mr. J. Foster White, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. White, Miss M. S. Herman, Miss M. W. Cushing, Miss C. E. Laurence, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stillman, Miss E. Stillman, Miss N. H. Stillman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gillingham, Miss Gillingham, Mr. J. H. Gillingham, Miss E. Goodwin, Miss E. T. Wadsworth, Miss L. G. Wadsworth, Dr. and Mrs. E. Newhall, Miss A. L. Newhall, Miss C. L. Floyd, Mr. and Mrs. Dearborn, Mr. W. O. Newhall, Mr. C. S. Newhall, Mr. and Mrs. John Belknap, Mrs. E. F. Leland, Miss E. A. Leland, Mr. J. H. Havner, Mr. Ellwood Wright, Mr. H. A. Muleberg, Mr. C. J. Milne, jr., Mr. David Milne, Mr. Samuel Rowland, Mr. Coollidge Bernard, and Mr. George Hinchins.

A Very Dull Day.

There was nothing new at the police court yesterday morning. The case was decided in nobody's favor, except that Mrs. Leclaire had to pay the court costs as rental of the instrument. A further instalment of the seventy odd thistle complaints that are to come before the courts, was heard with varying decisions in each case. It is rich food for reflection for the student of human nature to observe the different manners of the different offenders against the thistle by-law. If there be such a student in Victoria, he would be attending the police court learn a great deal in one day. Some of the people summoned to the matter as a regular occurrence, pay the fine and go away; well knowing that they will not be troubled for another year. Others grumble and look upon the matter as a grievance of no small account; while others still seem not to know why they are summoned, and pay over the fine with the air of a person who is being sadly imposed upon. The Dunsmuir nuisance complaint was up for the last time, and disposed of by a fine of five dollars.

British Columbia University.

In pursuance of the provisions of section 7 of the "British Columbia University Act, 1890," a meeting of the members of the convocation is to be held in the Legislative Assembly building on Tuesday, 20th inst., at 11 o'clock a.m. The business of the meeting will be the election of three of the members to act as the representatives of the convocation on the Council of the University.

Ornamental Shells.

The Mystery brought down a quantity of ornamental shells of many pretty designs. They will make charming borders for flower beds, garden paths and other purposes of a similar kind. In many large cities shells are found which have been transported many miles to decorate a house garden or deck the grave of a gone but not forgotten relative, and such ornamentation is always pleasing to the eye.

The Etta White.

Among those who accompanied Captain Whitelaw to the scene of the wreck of the steamer Etta White were Captain Melton, American Lloyd agent at Vancouver, and Captain Smith of the unfortunate vessel. They took with them all necessary appliances for raising the steamer which they expect to lift in a few days. She lies off the northwest point of Thimble Island, in the Malaspina straits.

A Profitable Season.

Speaking of the salmon season, yesterday, Mr. Spencer said that it had been very good, though short. The run of fish was large and thus made it possible for the canners to get in their full complement in a short space of time, making it more profitable in the matter of working. The month of July and the latter part of June witnessed very favorable weather, which added very largely to the success of the season. All things considered, Mr. Spencer says, there is nothing for the canners to grumble at this year.

What Is a Detective?

A detective is a man that requires good judgment, a judge of human nature, prompt and active, honest and reliable. Any man can call himself a detective, but it requires a man of experience to accomplish cases that are intrusted to his care. Mr. A. Lucas, who has opened an office at 132 Government street, has had fourteen years professional experience on the Pacific coast on important civil and criminal cases. Anyone that should ever have any confidential business to do will find it to their advantage to call on Mr. Lucas and give him a trial.

Salmon Pack Estimates.

The little steamer Mystery put into port yesterday as neat and clean after her two months' fishing up north as the day she went out. The captain says she is a perfect charmer, and works just like one. She got in here from Rivers Inlet in twenty-one hours. Mr. Spencer came down on her. He expects that the canners will be ready with their complete pack by the time the next steamer goes up. It is estimated that the Skeena river canneries will have about 15,000 cases each, Rivers Inlet about 15,000, McDowell's 10,000, and the others about 9,000. The Mystery will be employed generally now till the season re-opens.

Where Was Moses?

The Street committee, in order to reduce expenses, have discharged all the men but two or three. Meanwhile large nails point smilingly up out of the sidewalks, and jokingly rip one's boot to pieces, while the foot wearing the boot is plunged into a hole that looms into depths unknown, and a plank will fly mechanically up at the same time and hit one's anatomy in a very ungentle manner. This generally occurs at the time and place at which Moses is said to have been when the light went out, the only difference being that in trying to copy Moses, the light committee forgot to turn the light on first so as to put it out, and leave people in the dark.

Another Whaler.

The Thistle, built at Vancouver, was towed into harbor Sunday morning, and made fast at Spratt's wharf. She is owned by Mr. Manson, who also owned the Kestrel, that was wrecked some time ago. The Thistle is designed for whaling purposes, she being the ship in view in the protest entered against Captain Whitelaw's embarking in that industry. She will be a two masted vessel with auxiliary steam power. Although built after the model of the Maude, she is somewhat larger in dimensions, and will carry better accommodations. Her masts will be six feet longer than the Maude's, enabling her to carry an immense quantity of sail for a boat her size. It is intended that she will do some trading as well as whaling. Her machinery, for which she came down here, is being manufactured at the Albion iron works.

Alaskan Notes.

Mr. L. C. Russell and his exploring party who passed through Victoria a few weeks since, have reached Alaska and will proceed, under their object, which is to explore Mount St. Elias.

Three attempts have been made to climb St. Elias, one under the Royal Geographic Society, another under command of Lieut. Selkwaika, and another under an English Alpine club, but they were forced to return without accomplishing their object.

It has been decided to change the name of Sheep Creek to Silver creek, by which name it will henceforth be known.—Alaska Free Press.

The customs officials at Sheep creek have seized 225 gallons of whiskey that was being smuggled from this side.

It is reported that Sylvester McCann has made a big strike in the range lying between Shunk and Sam Dum bays. The discovery is gold quartz.

A Generous Tourist Party.

Mr. Luther L. Holden left the Queen at Nanaimo yesterday and came down by train so that he might arrange for the accommodation of his huge party. He says the first day on the trip was a success. The party was one never to be forgotten even by many who had been up in that country before on individual tours. The weather was simply delightful from the time they left Victoria till they got back again, umbrellas being only required for shading purposes. Should the party that is to go up by the Queen on her return trip, be similarly blessed, they will be extremely fortunate. A day was spent in all the most interesting places, and the most favorable impressions and views of the country were gained. Capt. Carroll says the trip was the most beautiful and favorable he had ever gone on. The Elder overtook the Queen at Juneau, and was also with her at Muir Glacier. On both boats were together about 350 passengers, who made things look lively at Sitka, where an Indian festival was in progress at the time. On the Queen, church services

AN ADMIRER OF VICTORIA.

A New York Gentleman Who is Charmed With This City and has Made His Investments.

Mr. Levi, of New York, importer of lace, on his return by the "Queen" from Alaska was yesterday waited upon by a COLONIST reporter at the Driford. He had been well pleased with his trip; but one of the most delightful of his experiences had been his visit to Victoria. Its situation and climate were so beautiful that the value of property must advance as, the more it became known, the better would it be appreciated as a resort for those who desired to enjoy life and have homes in what was a veritable paradise. He had called here before on his way up to Alaska and had been so much attracted that he had made considerable investments in property, in no way as a speculation, but as a genuine investment. It was time he thought for the people of British Columbia to wake up or they would find that their neighbors from the other side of the Sound and elsewhere had bought up all the available land. On his way down from Nanaimo he had obtained information which had served to increase his interest in this city and island.

What was wanted here was a few more people of nerve and energy. Here everything was promising; the evil of the country and the mineral products were not equalled, and there must be an early influx of men and capital which would completely alter the aspect of affairs. He might say that of the 136 passengers on the Queen, all were charmed with the climate and what they had seen in all directions. The building sites of Victoria and the residences it contained were most stocking and must induce wealthy and enterprising merchants from different points along the coast to make their homes here. This would have the effect of materially augmenting and extending business. As to the fishery question he thought, and was convinced that it must and would be settled amicably. None of the parties could afford to have a serious quarrel, while President Harrison and Secretary Blaine on the one side with the Canadian and British authorities on the other would never consent to a resort to war. We were all too near neighbors to allow of this, particularly as American interests were almost identical with those of Canada.

Seeking Victoria Investments.

Mr. Thos. S. Nowell, who passed through Victoria yesterday, represents an enormous amount of capital which seeks investment on this coast. The other day THE COLONIST announced a sale of $25,000 worth of property in Port Angeles to a Boston syndicate; Mr. Nowell is at the head of this. It was then hinted that the same syndicate would likely come to Victoria; this is the fact. They will be represented here by Mr. E. St. Q. Cockburn, who, by the way, was the mining expert who visited and inspected the Silver Bow basin mine, and whose able and exhaustive report was the means of bringing things in that place to their present flourishing state. It is the intention of the syndicate to invest heavily in Victoria property.

Visions of Vernon, B.C.

Mr. Schubert, of Vernon, B.C., came down yesterday, and registered at the Oriental. He reports that the Shuswap & Okanagan railway is progressing very favorably, it being expected that the cars will be running as far as Enderby this year. This fact is looked upon as a great boon to the people of that section of British Columbia.

The Columbia Flour Mills are running both night and day so as to make room for the coming crops. These are well under way, the steam thrashing being already in operation on the principle farms. Captain Short's new steamer will be running on the Okanagan lake. She is a pretty craft, and a credit to the enterprise of her owners. The townspeople of Vernon has not yet been placed on the market, but it will be floated very shortly. Mr. Vernon expects that it will grow to be a town of considerable size. The soil and climate of that part of the province are such that they cannot be excelled. Mr. Gurnard, the post-master, has a garden in which some splendid corn was grown this season, one stalk reaching a height of 12 feet. Game promises to be most plentiful, making the place a veritable happy hunting ground.

MAUDE GRANGER

Scores a Great Success in Her Production of "Inherited."

Last evening was the first appearance of Miss Granger before a Victoria audience, although she has long been known to them by reputation. She was not, therefore, recognized on her first entrance, but as the play went on and she demonstrated her high dramatic powers she was greeted with unbounded applause. "Inherited," although similar in many respects to several of the well-known standard emotional plays, is in many others different. In the second and last acts is this specially the case, and Miss Granger's interpretation of the loving wife gone mad, and the grief and fatal despair at the fancied death of her child, wrought her audience into an intense sympathy, moving many to tears. Her whole performance was without one flaw to mar the effect, and Miss Granger may now be counted among the first favorites of a Victorian audience. The support is of the best order, Harry Mainhall is not unknown here, and his acting as "Julian Raymond," the husband of the unfortunate Helen, was natural and pleasing. Chas. H. Mastayer as "Dr. Ambrose Raymond" was equal to the part of that interesting role, while Claude H. Brookies did all that was possible with the only amusing character of the piece, "Sammy Saunders." Miss Williams as Alice Pelham had a difficult role, but filled it well. Miss Carrie Elberts was a quaint and pleasing "Fay Merwin." Baby Parker created a furore by her precocious cleverness, and especially in her two little songs.

There is nothing but good that can be said of the whole production. It was a artistic treat to which, unfortunately, Victorians are but seldom accustomed, and last night they gave strong evidence of their thorough appreciation.

To-night Miss Granger will play her own version of "The Creole." This is looked upon as an especially meritorious play, and one in which she figures to powerful advantage. A crowded house is sure to greet her.

NOTES FOR WOMEN.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO THE FINE SEX.

How to Secure a Beautiful Skin—Courtship in Africa—A Successful Woman Journalist.

To Get A Beautiful Skin.

The plainest features become pretty when clothed with a fresh velvety skin. It is the power of every woman to have a soft, fine skin, thus adding much to her charms, if she will devote a little time and care to her toilet. It should be a duty as well as a pleasure to every woman to enhance the powers of attractiveness. First of all, one must keep the face free from those unsightly black heads or greasiness. Bathe the face in hot water; rub on a little oil and then take an old-fashioned watch key and pry out all the large ones. Afterward rub on cream or any soothing ointment. In the morning there will be no trace of the redness.

To have a clear skin it is essential to keep the digestive organs in good order and sleep as much as possible. Sleep will do more to preserve the freshness of youth than any other one thing. At night wash the face in warm water—never use hot—using soap freely to remove the dust of the day. Then take a pint of cold water, to which a tablespoonful of bay rum has been added, and bathe the face for five minutes. Dry the face on a coarse towel, rubbing gently to get up a pleasant friction. Lastly spread a little cream lightly on the face and neck. Use only the finest cream and purest soap in the market.

In the morning remove the grease with plenty of warm water and soap—followed by a cold bath at night. Then apply a little powder with a soft linen rag to remove the shine. Powder is an essential adjunct to a lady's toilet—let men say what they will to the contrary—but never use a cheap powder. The best will be found harmless. Avoid all face lotions, as their use is sure to ruin the skin. By following the above directions you will find in a short time that those horrid little specks that give the skin such a coarse look will disappear and the skin become as soft as a rose petal.—Ex.

Petticoats are Barbarous.

"Another point I make is the absurdity of dressing yourselves up in petticoats, which I call relics of barbarism. I haven't a petticoat in the world, but I remember the days of my bondage, when, like you, I tripped over my dress going up stairs, and only got that out of the way to fall over my petticoat beneath it; when, like you, I have stood on a corner on windy days, and had my petticoat wind round and round my legs until I couldn't stir; when, like you, on rainy days, I have gathered up my dress behind, only to have that petticoat hang out behind in the mud and rain. When my divided skirt winds, it winds only around one leg at a time, and thus leaves me one leg always free to depend upon. It can't trip me going up stairs or convert itself into a broom to sweep up all the refuse going down stairs. Make your dresses by all means in the prevailing fashion of the day, but adapt that fashion and drape it on a gown form that neither exerts undue pressure at any point or makes its weight felt in one place more than another. Let the weight be evenly distributed and plenty of room at the waist line.—Mrs. Jenness Miller.

Courtship in Africa.

Mr. Stevens was entertained at dinner by the Savage Club, London, a few evenings since and related that, among the Wa-Fetia, as with most African tribes, is simply a question of purchasing the bride from her parents. The price of one of those elegant and beaded bejeweled damsels (presumably beads and all) is three to four cows.

The coy damsel, in accordance with an ancient custom of the tribe, affecting to flee from the consummation of her own happiness, runs away and hides in the hut of some relative. Collecting his friends, and armed with the search warrant of time-honored custom, the groom then enters the hut, and after a short house where he fancies his bride may be concealed.

At length the shrinking maiden is discovered, amid much merriment, and is drawn triumphantly from her hiding place. Four of the groom's assistants, seizing each an arm or leg, then carry her off to her new home.

A Successful Woman Journalist.

One of the most interesting personalities in the field of European journalism is Mrs. Crawford, who is a brilliant example of her favorite theory, that there is nothing that a man can do that a woman cannot do, and there are some things that would be more difficult for a man to do than it would be for a woman. While still in her teens some private letters of hers fell into the hands of a London editor, who was so struck with their vivacity of style and originality of sentiment that he engaged her as a contributor to his paper. Promptly she set herself to work to master the science of politics, which topic is usually avoided by journalistic women as both complicated and unbecoming. A single instance of her power of endurance, memory and determination indicates the manner of woman she is and the spirit with which she races her duty. On the occasion of the historic debate of May 25 at Versailles she sat in her place in the loge grille, which Mr. Thiers' friendship had procured for her, from early morning until midnight without taking a single note, and carried away all the important points of that extraordinary sitting. When she returned to Paris and sat up until 5 o'clock the next morning to complete her description of the scene and abstract of the speeches. On the 23d of March, 1871, she made her way alone into the barricaded city of Paris and interviewed the communist leaders as they sat in council. No harm or insult was offered to the plucky little woman whose ready wit, natural intrepidity and sympathy with the people were her only weapons. She has walked the wards of the cholera hospitals amid the dead and dying, and, prompted by the same journalistic instinct, has rushed at midnight through a thunderstorm in satin slippers and a ball dress to the nearest telegraph station to send a description of the dresses.

Her social life is not less brilliant than her professional career. She was the intimate friend of Gaubetta, the companion of Thiers and Louis Blanc, the friend of Bartholomy de St. Hilaire, and, besides all the rest, she has been a happy wife and brought up four children, whose promise of success is most apparent. And she was only a woman, a weaker vessel, a descendant of Eve.

A Young Lady Personates Influenza.

At the last fancy dress ball attended by the nobility of St. Petersburg, the palm was awarded to a young lady attired to represent the influenza. She was dressed in Oriental fashion, and wore on her head a tall cap inscribed with the names of the principal doctors who have studied the disease. The map of Europe was depicted on her skirts, and a gigantic spider occupied a prominent position on the shores of the Bae. The lady's fun was covered with the names of those chemists who welcomed the arrival of the fatal scourge. During the evening she distributed leaflets with poems extolling its virtues; fever, pains in the head, aching of the joints, etc.—Il Caffaro.

Prof. Lookaten's new dictionary will, it is promised, very soon be out. The following definitions are from advance sheets of the work:

Glimpse of a Famous Woman.

This woman who sweeps by in the gay crowd on Broadway was a famous beauty in her day. She is still good looking. Her face is a trifle stouter, and there are wrinkles on her brow and crows' feet in her cheeks, but it is still a face that would be noticed in a crowd. It is Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague. This once famous beauty, who wielded more power in American politics perhaps than any other American woman has ever done, is going down the hill of life in a quiet, easy way. She comes to New York occasionally to visit friends, but her home is in Washington. She is no longer the gay butterfly of fashion, and her dresses, while fashionable and well made, have not the dash that made her so much talked about in ante-bellum days. Her life in the national capital is a simple one. There is none of the luxury at Edgewood that characterized her life during her father's career. But she is happy, nevertheless, for her children are growing up around her; her old friends are still true to her and she looks on calmly at the progress of events with a smiling face.—[New York Letter.

Wasn't Losing His Memory.

Scotch railway station. Ticket collector or in making his collection finds an old gentleman fumbling in his pockets for his ticket.

Ticket collector—Tickets, please.

Old gentleman—Well, I'm just lookin' for it.

Ticket collector—Well, I'll look in again in a few minutes. See and have it ready then.

(Ticket collector returns shortly; but the old gentleman is still hunting for it.)

Ticket collector (suddenly)—Why, you have it in your mouth, man!

Old gentleman (giving him the ticket)—Oh, so I have! Here you are!

Another gentleman in the carriage as train moves on, to first gentleman—I'm afraid you're losing your memory, sir.

Old gentleman—Nae fear o' that; nae fear o' that! The ticket was a fortnight o'ld, and wis I jist sookin' the date aft'!

His Friends Wouldn't know Him.

Mr. Cleveland's abnormal increase in weight is beginning to attract the alarmed attention of his friends. His great obesity has not been exaggerated by published reports. On the contrary, it is doubtful if the papers have given a fair idea of the extraordinary change which has come over the ex-President of the United States. He goes to a Baptist Church on 57th Street every Sunday, and the congregation there have watched his visible increase in size with sentiments bordering on amazement. It is said that he is considering the question of putting himself upon a system of diet. At present the fat of his neck lies over the collar of his shirt and coat in three heavy folds.

To Prevent Wrinkles.

A frown will mar the prettiest face. It doesn't matter about a boy, but this small girl does violence to beauty and youth by ruffling her forehead or fluting her brow. It is, too, a habit acquired very early in life. After her pouting days are over she begins to frown, and keeps on frowning until old enough to realize the banefulness of the habit. In other words, each ridge is supposed to add a decade to her apparent age. Now, somebody has made the discovery of a couple of muscles between the bridge of the nose and the root of the hair which can be cut without pain or injury to the feelings or face. The services of a skilled surgeon are secured, who applies the knife, severs the delicate cord, dresses the wound, and after the skin heals the forehead becomes as smooth as the temple, and what is more remarkable, remains so. Whoever says that the New York woman does not study her glass is a sublimated idiot. Her motto of life is "Know thyself."—[N. Y. World.

Mother's Son.

My son is great, is good and wise, He has both land and gold, I walk in shades of love and joy A woman now grown old; Beauty was mine of form and face, Fullness of joy and grief, The sacred love of my dear son, Is life's one garnered sheaf.

O, he is tall, and full of strength, Has won him a fair wife, Children about him fairer still Bring joy and care to life; Not one can crowd me from his heart Nor push me to the wall— His smile still says, "Of all the loves Mother's was first of all." Never forgotten in power nor care, No love in days of yore, Brought to my heart such love and praise Nor votive offering more. He comes each morn when duty calls— Turns from them all for this— "Give me a morning greeting, dear, Yours is the lucky kiss!" I live in dreams of all that's past— Babyhood's gleeful life; Boyish blunders, ambition's aims, Manhood's stirring and strife, Closer and closer his dear arms fold As life seems almost done; Sacred words I say in his ear, "Mother's love and son."

There's lots o' gals in our town That's prettier'n blazes;
There's gals o' every kind of shape
And every kind of faces;
And all them gals are arter me,
For I'm the village beau—
But Jess, she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

There's Mary with a pair o' eyes
That look on meso tender, But sparkle, when she's jealous, like The firelight on the fender; There's Daisy, with a voice that sound Like music sweet and low—
But Jess she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

There's Susan with the little hand, Gosh! but it's pert and cunning;
And Maggie with a laugh that has A whole cart-load of fun in;
There's Lottie with the yellow hair And brow just like the snow—
But Jess, she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

Now Jess, she ain't a beauty,
But quite the t'other way;
Her feet come from Chicago
And her hair is coarse as hay, Her shape is sort o' twisted Her teeth ain't in a row—
But then she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

Her hands are big and bony,
And speckled like a trout;
And her eyes chase one another, Sometimes in and sometimes out;
And her nose is made for pokin' Into things she shouldn't know—But she knows she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

And her temper, tain't much better Than her looks, as I can see;
I never cotton'd to the way She's always bossin' me;
When she's real rampagous Good Lord, how she can blow!
But with all, she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

Now there's themas thinks I'm foolish;
For, when, in a fellow's lap, All the sweet and pretty gals is Waitin' ready for to drap, That to one he ought to buckle;
But them gals don't stand no show—
For Jess, she's got the boodle,
And I'm her Joe.

The Women who Dress Decollete.

Women who wear decollete gowns comprise three classes, but one of which is justified, and wears it with propriety.
The woman "to the manner born," educated to it, taught the propriety of such exposure along with her catechism, wears this dress as a soldier does his uniform, as a matter of form, of duty, of necessity and of habit. Such women wear this exposed garment with no more notion of imdecency than is entertained by the dusky belle of the Sandwich Islands when she makes her debut in a string of beads, a cotton apron and clinking anklets. The second class, not so well warranted in following the fashion, are the women not educated to it, ladies whose early life and training were not in the decollete circles, but who, instead, have imbibed much of the stern puritanism, or prudishness, or provincialism, if you will, of orthodox teaching, of modest example, and of rural simplicity. The woman whose sudden rise of position prompts her into an un-customed baring of her neck and arms, against her conscience, commits an impropriety. The third class are the vain women, the silly and coquettish women, the women who have perfect figures and magnificent intellects. These are the women who have, in the eagerness for admiration, disgraced the social regalia and made it a reproach. The important thing is not how the body but how the mind is clothed. When a high-cut mind goes out in company with a low-cut dress the world does not concern itself with the robe. But a decollete spirit will permeate an assembly though its neck-band tickles its ears and wrist frills mask the hand.—

Got There at Last.

Modern detective methods have made it very difficult for the criminal of to-day to escape the hand of justice. About two years ago a package supposed to contain $41,000 was delivered by the Adams Express Company to the Treasury Department at Washington, but when it was opened it was found to consist of nothing but a bundle of wrapping paper.
Many theories as to the identity of the perpetrator of the theft were advanced, but none of them could be established, and the express company made good the loss. The famous detective, Robert Pinkerton, however, had all along suspected one of the messengers of the New-York bank which had sent the parcel, and kept his eye on him. Last fall, when the matter had blown over, this man disappeared, and soon after turned up in British Honduras, where he bought a plantation. He was not long there, however, before Mr. Pinkerton appeared on the scene, with the result that the express messenger has confessed that he was the thief, and is now being brought back to New York with the greater part of the stolen money. Owing to the bandage over her eyes, Justice may not be able to see very far, but she has a wonderfully keen scent.—Toronto Mail.

A New Scheme to Defraud Farmers.

A sharper with a new scheme is travelling through some of the neighboring counties. He has an improved plough-share which which he loans to some influential farmer, with the provision that if it proves satisfactory he will recommend it to his neighbors, and if at the end of the season he does not wish to keep it, he is to ship it to any address given him. If the unsuspecting farmer agrees to do this, the sharper draws up an article of agreement. This is written with a peculiarly constructed fountain pen, there being two compartments in the holder, which contains two kinds of ink, one which will fade, while the other will remain. With the former he writes the article and changes the pen, hinds it to the farmer, who signs his name with the latter kind. The result is that the words of the article soon fade, and the sharper has a piece of white paper with the farmer's name thereon, and can make it into a note of any denomination at his leisure.—Penn Yan Democrat.

VANDERFELT'S ROAST PIG.

Al Feast Fit for the Montezumas Prepared by a Well Known Actor.

E. H. Vanderfelt, the actor, has an accomplishment which many of his friends enjoy as much as he. He can roast a pig as never pig was roasted, before, these friends think, and he roasts one often, and when he does this a merry party sits around the board on which the savory, crisp, brown and tempting dish is placed.

The man whose heart will not warm over a deliciously roasted perfectly dressed and handsomely garnished pig, must be a misanthropic cynic. But the man who could watch Vanderfelt in the kitchen from the time he begins his cooking until he pulls from the oven the great pan, steaming and crackling, without getting into a sympathetic condition of intense and breathless interest, ought never to have the good fortune to eat a well roasted young porker.

Vanderfelt adorns himself with a great spotted apron and, armed with a wonderful roasting-fork, he marches to the kitchen and takes possession of it. No part of the preparing of that meal is done by hands other than his. He dresses the pig, places it in the oven, savors it, bastes it, plunges his fork into the golden brown of the flesh, takes it out in triumph when it is done, and with a radiant face bears it to the table for the "feast in the Halls of the Montezumas."

As he carves it, his satisfaction is so great that he begins eloquently to sing the praises of roast pig, and then the "fun" begins—

Getting Well Since His Grave Was Dug.

A friendless man in a small town in Maine, after suffering many years with a cancer and using all his hard-earned money, mortgaged his small farm last fall for a sum sufficient to get him into the Maine General Hospital, went there to die, but has lingered through the winter suffering acutely. A week or more ago word was sent to the town authorities from the hospital to make arrangements at once for his burial, as he could not possibly live but a few hours, and his body would need immediate attention. So in the lonely village churchyard was dug his grave, which still awaits its occupant.
Strange to relate, the condition of the sick man has since changed for the better, and there is a possibility that he will recover sufficiently to return to find no house and no welcome save the open grave on the bleak hillside.—Boston Record.

Boots of Human Skin.

In 1876 the firm of Hahneholz Bros., boot and shoe makers of New York City, made a pair of boots from human skin which they sent to the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. If we remember rightly, they were never put on exhibition, which goes to show that there was some humanity in the Centennial officials if not in the makers of the ghastly foot-gear. Afterwards they were sent to Professor S. V. Baird of the Smithsonian Institution, who would not allow them shelf room. The skin from which the boots were made was taken from the breast, stomach and back of a man who had died suddenly, and had been taken to a medical college. In general looks the boots were of a light brown color and somewhat heavier than if made from calf skin. The dark color was caused by the tanning process. The leather was much more porous than either calf or cow skin.—St. Louis Republic.

Saw a Tragedy in a Dream.

Some time ago a lady from Macon was visiting relatives in Athens. She had been there about a week when she suddenly received a telegram one morning from her home in Macon saying her nephew was quite sick. On reading the telegram the lady suddenly grew pale and appeared unduly excited about the news received. She did not speak, however, about it until she was leaving Athens on the Georgia Railroad.

Then she told another lady from Athens, who accompanied her, the story of her dream before leaving the town which she had had a most frightful dream about this same nephew.
She said that she dreamed he had become engaged in a row with one or two other men and had been horribly shot and fatally wounded. The frightful vision was so impressed on her mind that she could even at that moment see her nephew shot down like a dog, and bleeding on the floor.

The slight made her sick and the lady almost fainted on the car. She was told that it was only a dream and that it could have no bearing on the telegram whatever, as the telegram had only stated that her nephew was sick. When the ladies changed cars at Barnett for Macon, a friend of the Macon lady came in the car, and, in the presence of the Athens lady, told her that the nephew had been shot, and in very much the same way that the dream had recounted.

A Chimney Sweep as L.L.D.

A correspondent in an Edinburgh paper relates that not long ago, in one of the Scotch Police courts, a sweep, who was about to give evidence, on being asked his name, replied,
"Dr. Thomas Macleod."

"Doctor! Doctor of what?" inquired the Sheriff, in amazement.

"I dinna ken, but I'm what they ca' an

"Well," asked the judge, "and how did you acquire the distinction?"
"Well, sir, it was like this. A Yankee child, that was agent for yin o' the colleges in his country, cam' tae bide hereabouts wi' his family for tae Summer. I scoopt his three lums twice, but del a bawbee could I get out o' him. An day I yokit, sair, at the crater for the siller, an says he, 'Weel, Tammas, I'll mak' an L.L.D. o' ye, and I'll be pit even.' I just took him at his offer, as there seemed tae be nothin' else for t'. I've gotten me diploma framed at home, and I can tell ye, sir, a bonnie pictur' it mak's."—

A St. Louis Husband's Hint for Bashful Young Men.

A writer in the Young Men Globe Democrat says: "I was very much amused at the article published a few days ago on 'How Girls are Proposed To.' I think the way I proposed was just as unique, and the time and method a little more novel than the methods the fellows in that article adopted. It was a case of love at first sight, but the girl didn't know how I felt, neither was I sure that she cared a continental for me. She was a modest retiring, bashful little thing, and while I wanted to tell her how much I thought of her I was afraid to. One Sunday night, the fourth time I had called, I made up my mind fully that I wanted her, but she was so shy I thought it would frighten her away if I spoke. About 10 o'clock I proposed a game of cards, and in a joke suggested that we play for a wager, and that she put herself up against me. She modestly consented. I thought I was going to lose, and I knew if I did I was a lost chance, even if it was a joke. Well, I won, and told her with a laugh that she belonged to me. After sitting and looking at each other a few moments I took her hand and said she must always pay her losses, and the hand that I held was mine.
She looked at me with a smile and said quietly, 'Well, if you want it you can have it.' I won that girl by a game of cards on Sunday, but we neither have regretted the violating the fourth commandment. Perhaps my method may help some other bashful couple."

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S OHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
Advice to Invalids—If you wish to obtain relief from pain and anguish, to calm and quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, assuage the weary aching of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous system, and regulate the circulating system of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne late Army Medical Staff, to which he gave the name of Chlorodyne, and which is adapted by the profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all the other ailments of the chest.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Menstritis, etc.

Dr. J. Collis Browne communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging furiously, and that the only remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE—See "Lancet," December 31, 1884.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "The Times," July 13, 1884.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and its each. None is genuine without the words
"Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle. Caution—Beware of Piracy and Imitations.
Sole Manufacturer—J. F. DAVENPORT, 33 Great Russell-square, Bloomsbury, London.
